PARIS CAPTURED; SURRENDER OF ALL FRANCE IS HINTED

Our Daily Bread

ALEX. H. WASHBURN

The Collapse of France

Nations Lose From the Inside

Exactly five weeks from the day the Germans started their "total war" Paris is captured, France is hinting surrender—and it begins to look more like a French collapse than a German victory. It was Friday, May 10, that the Nazis invaded Holland. This is Friday, June 14—five weeks later—and the Germans are in Paris. A world power like France isn't conquered in five weeks—if it happens, it happens from the inside. And France today stands as a deadly warning to every citizen of every democratic country on earth.

You need only recall the newspaper history of France since the last war to understand what was going on behind the scenes in Paris.

The French after 1918 were "top dog" in Europe. They had what was supposed to be the No. 1 army of the world. They had a fleet second only to Britain's, in Europe. They had a gold reserve second only to the United States—and per capita France had actually more gold than anybody.

And what did France do between two world wars? Her people quarreled among themselves, class against class, industry against industry, each seeing which could get most out of government.

Cabinet after cabinet rose and fell, crushed by the impossible task of asking government to take care of the people, when it is the people who have to take care of government.

France had millions of pensioners, and those who did work for a living worked precious few hours.

It was the way the French people wanted it—and Paris was a pleasant place to live . . . civilized people in a civilized land.

And then the barbarians came.

There is an ancient parallel you know about. Rome ruled the world for 900 years. But the Romans grew old and lazy and corrupt. They allowed their politicians to bribe the voters with free corn. . . . And one day the barbarians came down—of all places!—out of this same Germany and took Rome and burned it and reduced the Romans to slaves.

I am tired of hearing these modern Germans called "supermen." They put their pants on like other men. History simply says of Old Rome: "The city had grown old and corrupt, and the barbarians came down out of the hills and sacked it."

They had no smart writers in ancient days to coin alibi words like "supermen"—and history was written hard and true.

Rural Sections of County Reporting Red Cross Funds

McCaskill and Blevins Turn in $75 for Friday

DRIVE CONTINUES

Chairman Weisenberger Urges Public to Donate

As Hope and DeRoane township's Red Cross drive neared completion with reports so far totaling $867.11, Mrs. Candes Moses and A. B. Wetherington, chairmen for the Blevins-McCaskill branch of the Hempstead county chapter reported a total of $75 contributed by citizens of Blevins and McCaskill, making that area the first in the county exclusive of Hope and DeRoan Township to report.

The chairmen express their appreciation for the excellent response on the part of the people of Wallaceburg and Redland townships.

Royce Weisenberger, county chairman, urges all workers in the county at large to make one last effort over this week end and then to report to him as soon as possible in order that the funds raised can be turned into the National Headquarters.

CRANIUM CRACKERS

Famous First Lines

From what famous poems are these first lines taken? You should know the authors also. Name all five.

1. "There, little girl, don't cry!
They have broken your doll,
I know."
2. "Ay, tear her tattered ensign down.
Long has it waved on high."
3. "Sunset, and evening star,
And one clear call for me!"
4. "Break, break, break,
On thy cold, gray stones, O Seal"
5. "Sweet and low, sweet and low,
Wind of the western sea."

1940 Political Drift in U. S. Parallels Events of Other World War Days, 1916

Americans Dazed by Feeling They Are Seeing It Over

War Abroad, Threats South of Us — and an Election

1916 IS REVIEWED

Democrats Got Peace Vote Then — Just Barely Won

By WILLIS THORNTON
NA Service Staff Correspondent

PHILADELPHIA — The Democrats seem certain to renominate the President. Preparedness is the order of the day. The country is worried about foreign-influenced activities. Mexico and German activities in Mexico are a problem. The President is being attacked as too pro-Ally. Some say he is eager to get us into a war. Others praise him for keeping us out—

—but wait a minute! This is 1940. And the sentences above all describe the pre-convention days of the summer of 1916!

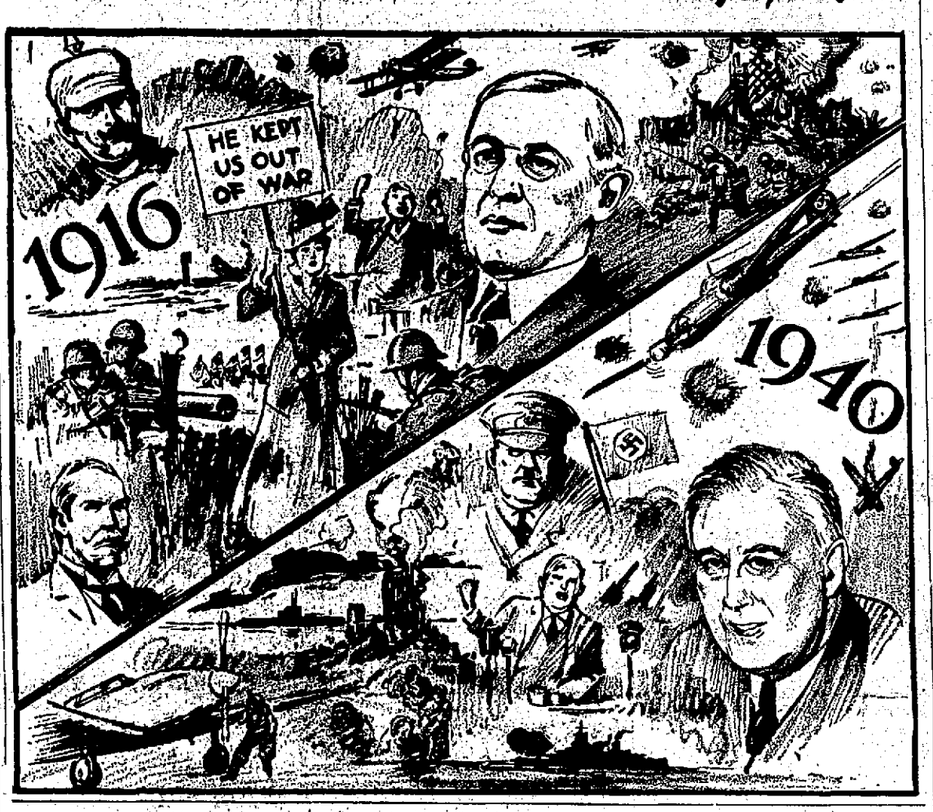

That uncanny feling of having seen it all before, which afflicts Americans born before 1900, comes to the front in today's preconvention political activities as strongly as it does in reading the war news itself. The fate of France hung then on terrific battles near Paris, as it does today. And worry about the war in Europe, with near-panic over American unpreparedness gripped the country then as now.

Secretary of War Garrison had resigned, unable to get presidential support of his "continental army" plan, and worried over the showing of the National Guard in the Villa expedition in March, 1916. Parades, meetings, and propaganda were agitating for preparedness.

Hughes Was G. O. P. Compromise Nominee

Everybody knew President Wilson would be renominated by the Democrats. He said in February, 1916, that he would run. After Bryan resigned as secretary of state in a disagreement over the Lusitania notes, Wil-

Safety Stickers to Be Sold Here

B. & P. W. Club Sponsors Local Safety Campaign

A safety campaign was launched Thursday by the B & PW club designed to make Hope safety-conscious, according to Miss Mary Fletcher, club president.

Chief features of the drive for more safety measures will be the distribution of safety stickers, through sale, in a number of different colors and designs. The stickers are to be attached to letters, letterheads, packages, and statements, or placed in any conspicuous place. The stickers illustrate many different ways in which people are injured carelessly. The purpose of this form of safety education is to carry out over a period of months the program which the state and other governmental agencies are trying to put over with the public in general, the club president said.

The campaign fits in well with universal public safety education by placing safety maxims and slogans continually in the public eye. Miss Fletcher stated that she felt that the public need for caution was greater now than at any time in the past due to the nervousness created by the war situation.

A group of Boy Scouts will assist with the selling campaign.

WPA to Ban Men of Military Age

State Administrator in Tennessee Takes Action

NASHVILLE, Tenn. —(AP)— Work Projects Administration aid to Tennesseans of military age was cut off Thursday. State WPA Administrator Harry S. Berry sent this memorandum to district directors:

"In making future assignments, district directors will issue instructions that no certified relief client of military age, 18 to 35 years, who is without dependents, shall be assigned to a WPA project; and in making reductions men in this category will be the first released."

Berry issued hsi order after inquiries to military recruiting oficials which disclosed enlistments in this area were relatively few.

New French Defense 65 Miles South "If the Fight Goes on"

Paris Captured for First Time Since Days of Bismarck, 1871 — Spain Seizes Tangier International Zone

By the Associated Press

Hitler's armies swept past fallen Paris late Friday, striking 30 miles south of the Marne to Romilly, on the far upper Seine, and stormed the Maginot line in a bold frontal attack.

By the Associated Press

Hitler's armies marched into the streets of Paris Friday, captured the vital port of Le Havre and launched a bold frontal attack on the Maginot line.

German mechanized columns swarmed behind the main Maginot fortifications between Paris and Montmedy to imperil from the rear the million French Poilus manning the line.

In case of assault from behind, it was not believed the French could turn the Maginot guns around.

The French government reported fleeing from Tours, presumably to take refuge at Bordeaux on the southwest coast.

Destruction of eight Allied transports off Le Havre and damage to six others was reported by the Nazi high command, indicating heavy losses in British troops rushing to the support of the beleaguered French.

First Time Since 1871

It was the first time since Bismarck took Paris in 1871 that German soldiers marched into the French capital.

Weakening French resistance was indicated in a heavily-censored dispatch from Tours stating a new defense line would be taken up on the Loire river, 65 miles south of Paris, "if the fight goes on."

The Italian high command announced Italian troops drove back a French attack on the Alpine frontier at Galisia hill, 36 miles northwest of Turin.

The French air ministry announced its air force is continuing "their action in the battle."

The official Gazette of the Union of South Africa said a mobile field force is operating with the British forces in East Africa.

German Capture Paris

BERLIN—(AP)—"Pursuit of the enemy until final destruction has now begun," the German high command declared triumphantly Friday, announcing the conquest of Paris, Le Havre and Montmedy, and the collapse of France's northern line.

The Nazi have launched a frontal attack on the Maginot line from the Saar region, the command said.

Spain Grabs Tangier

MADRID—(AP)—Spanish troops occupied the Tangier international zone in the name of the Sultan of Morocco to safeguard the independence and neutrality of the city, a foreign ministry spokesman announced Friday.

Two divisions of land troops and a destroyer effected the occupation. It was explained semi-officially that the action was taken after consultations with interested nations.

Britain Rushes Supplies

LONDON—(AP)—France's plight has caused Britain to drop her plans for a long war and go "all out" with her resources, sources close to the government said Friday.

This releases funds and credits for purchase in America of anything which will convey or fire explosives. The fund was originally allocated for future years.

As a result of this policy, Britain is giving the United States a blank check, in effect, for any kind of useable war material.

French in New Appeal

TONRS, France—(AP)— Premier Reynaud made a "final" appeal Thursday night to President Roosevelt for "clouds" of aircraft and challenged Americans to "declare themselves against Nazi Germany." "We know what a high place ideals hold in the life of the great American people," he said in a broadcast. "Will they

For the Love of Freedom . . .

I call effort, courage, sacrifice, devotion. Granting the love of freedom, all of these are possible.

And the love of freedom is still today.

It is, Mr. President.

And no President has ever called on the American people for effort, courage, sacrifice, and devotion with out receiving those things in overflowing measure.

George Washington called for them when the patriots starved and froze at Valley Forge. Lincoln and Davis called for them as they led their momentarily divided sections, Americans all, against each other. Woodrow Wilson called for them when an ambitious European autocrat once before dashed to hits the peace of the world.

Each time the American people responded, and showed a devotion to their ideals that all the world respected. They will not fail to respond today.

Today it is not war which immediately demands the effort and the sacrifice. It is a re-dedication.

A whole generation has enjoyed the benefits of peace and fredom without having had to shoulder the load of duties that go with them. We have all from millionaire to relief client, accepted what we could get from our free governmental and social system, but precious few have felt the need to give service and devotion in return. That is not true of all. There have been men and women in both classes, millionaires and relief clients, who have devotedly given service in return for what they had received. But now all must give, all must serve.

We have inclined to think that our freedom was a thing absolute, handed down only to be preserved, like the draft of the Constitution kept in a glass case in the Library of Congress.

Faced with the grim reality of the brutal evenis tumbling over each other in Europe, every American now realizes that his freedom is a thing for which he must pay in service and devotion if it is to be preserved.

Only those who know the American people imperfectly imagine that they are "decrepit." What is needed to preserve freedom, the American people will give in overflowing measure. Who challenges that freedom will find that the President was right when he said:

And the love of freedom is still fierce and steady in the nation today.

Twenty-two U. S. presidents were lawyers—by far the leading profession in that office.

WE THE WOMEN

By RUTH MILLETT

"I hope you'll be very happy, my dear."

What do we mean when we say that to a bride? What are we wishing for?

Not perfect contentment always. We know that no person can ever hope for that.

We hope your marriage will last as long as you live, That you will never seriously wish you hadn't married the man you chose.

We hope that you will make a happy home for your husband—one that is equally important to you both.

We hope that you will have a family—a fine family, of which you will be proud.

Fortune, Youth, And a Place

We hope that the years will bring you more than you have now—so that the life you and your husband find together will have enough material success to keep you from feeling like failures.

We hope that you will not grow old before you should, either from worry or too hard work.

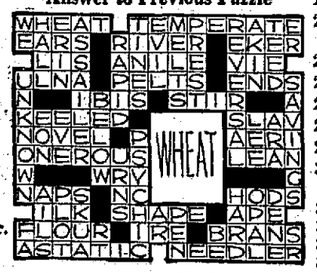

We hope you will build a fine place for yourself in the community where you are to live.

That is really what the friends and relatives mean when they kiss the bride and say with bright smiles, "I hope you'll be very happy."

A Dangerous Camouflage

Pat and Mike were detailed for scout duty overseas. The commanding officer ordered them to conceal themselves in a cow's hide and pretend to graze over toward the Russian trenches. Pat was given the front legs and Mike the hind legs.

All went well until Pat received a prod from his buddy. "Come on, let's get out of here," hissed Mike.

"What's the matter?" queried Pat.

"Matter?" snorted Mike. "Here comes a Russian with a milk pail."

Haggai Urges Building of God's House Along With Own Pleasure and Comfort

—TAOIIII ET

Text: Haggai 1:2-12

By WILLIAM E. GILROY, D. D.
Editor of Advance

Haggai was one of the socalled minor prophets, who prophesied after the Jews had returned from the Babylonian exile, about 520 B. C. The minor prophets were not necessarily lesser figures than the major prophets, nor is their tecahing any the less noteworthy. The distinction between major and minor seems to reflect in some measure the extent of the records that have come down to us.

It is quite possible that some of these minor prophets were in their own time quit as important figures as the major prophets. Certainly the quality of these minor prophecies makes us regret that we do not have more extnsiv records of what these great preachers in ancient Israel had to say.

Haggai, as we have indicated, prophesied in Israel in a time of restoration and rebuilding. Great projects and many problems unquestionably confronted the Jews as they returned from their long exile in Babylon. Homes had to be rebuilt; towns and cities had to be restored. In all this rebuilding it was easy to set aside something that could be done later, and there were those who said that it was not a propitious time for building the House of God.

How modern all this seems! How frequently in various comunities this problem has arisen of whether churches or schools shall have the proper place, or even the pre-eminence! People say, "We ought to have a better church," or 'We ought to have a better school building, but we can't afford it," or "The time is not right for action." Yet, how often in modern times it is those who speak in this way who have been most comfort and in spending upon themselves!

This was precisely the situation that Haggai faced in ancient Israel. These people who were saying that it was not the time to build the Lord's House were dwelling in their own ceiled and well-built houses.

Haggai asks them very plainly and properly whether this is wise building. He represents Jehovah as saying to the people that this is not the way of real prosperity. "Go up," says Jehovah, "to the mountain, and bring wood, and build the House of the Lord."

It is only in co-operation with God that there can be in any society true and permanent building. Man must work with the forces of God in nature, but he must also work with the God of grace and righteousness and truth.

It is possible for men to be very busy about the affairs of the world, to be doing everything that seems necessary for building up wealth and prosperity, and yet to b neglecting the very things upon which truth, happiness, and human welfare depend.

Consider the communities that have given the proper place to rligion and workship. Almost invariably, they have been prosperous communities. The Puritans in New England came to a region of the country, much of which was barren with rock and great stretches of which were in marshes. Yet, with what permanency they built as they built faith and the recognition of spiritual values into their communities! It was this spirit of devotion that enabled them to make the best of all they had. And this is the story of what has happened again and again in communities where men and women have given the primary place to religion. "Seek ye first the Kingdom of God, and all these things shall be added."

under Hitler?

A friend of mine quotes Eddie Rickenbacker, American world war ace who now is president of Eastern Airlines, as saying:

"Any nation can rise whose people are willing to work 70 hours a week."

But Eddie Rickenbacker was only paraphrasing the idea behind America herself.

Our forefathers started with nothing. They built the greatest nation on earth.

But today we are relaxed—at least we were relaxed until events in Europe scared the daylights out of us.

Let us study the tragedy of France and resolve to make it an object lesson for our own republic.

Our pioneer days are behind us.

And that is our great danger.

For it was Benjamin Franklin who said: "It is easier to build two chimneys than to keep one in fuel."

It's not so exciting, running a house after it is built.

But if we don't run it, keep it defended, keep its bills paid,—then we can look at France and know what will happen to ourselves.

The circus strong man rode out on horseback to challenge a farmer whose great strength had gained him a reputation. He entered the farmyard, tied up his horse and approached the farmer.

"Hey," he said. "I've heard a lot about you, and have come a long way to see which is the better man."

Without answering the farmer seized the intruder, hurled him bodily over the fence into the road and returned to his work.

When the loser had recovered his breath the farmer growled, "Have you anything more to say to me?"

"No," was the reply, "but perhaps you'll be good enough to throw me my horse."

Reich's Politics Divide and Take

Nazi Policy and War Scatters Britain's Allies

By MORGAN M. BEATTY
AP Feature Service Writer

WASHINGTON—Now that Mussolini has jumped into the European struggle, Hitler's master plan emerges out of the shadows, takes shape on the map of Europe.

Scatter and Squeezel That's the nub of it; a modern day version of divide and conquer.

For seven years Hitler's been scattering forces opposed to him.

He set out to split up the force of the great British Empire, strip away the shock-absorbing friends and allies in order to expand the Reich. Czechoslovakia, Poland, Norway, other friends of England were pinched off the France-British orbit one by one.

Hitler's first step was his only failure—up to now. Hitler failed to lure France away from England by guaranteeing the French border, foreswearing for all time any claim on Alsace and Lorraine. He's paying today for that failure with scores of thousands of lives on the battlefields of France.

But the next Hitler step—the axis with Italy and Japan was successful. So was his next, the non-aggression treaty with Russia, which released his entire national force to hurl at foes on the west.

These two maneuvers were as important to Hitler as any campaign in blood. Not only did they give him an opportunity to strike as a single united nation, at a moment he chose, but they also scattered the might of the French and British empires all over the globe.

Military observers agree that almost 1,000,000 soldiers in the service of these two empires were diverted by Hitler policies to the Mediterranean. Fully two-thirds of the French fleet was lured into the Mediterranean to meet the oft-repeated Italian threats to strip the French empire of Mediterranean islands and African colonies. From one-fourth to one-third of the British fleet was enticed away from home to guard Britain's lifeline through the Mediterranean, and to watch axis-partner Japan, on the rampage in the Far East.

Couldn't Stop Him

So, when Hitler marched into Holland and Belgium on May 5, the military and naval might was not where it was needed. It might have been enough to stop Hitler. But it wasn't there.

Finally, came June 10, and Mussolini. The Italian dictator probably has kept an extra million men off Hitler's neck during the last year and weakened the British blockade. He has been Hitler's No. 1 stooge and scatterer.

Now, Il Duce is charged with shearing off from France and Engalnd their African empires; with attacking France from the south, to give the German army a lift for a final squeeze against France—England's last ally.

Like all German military plans, the final maneuver against France is an envelopment—a squeeze play.

Already German panzer divisions are trying to encircle Paris in a military version of 'scatter and squeeze.'

The Italian army role is to push up from the south, join the German forces somewhere near the southwestern tip of Switzerland. If completed, these two maneuvers, the German encirclement in the north, and the Italian-German thrust from the south, would flank the Maginot at both ends, turn the French army back on itself, and menace the heart of France.

Weygand Chooses

Already France's Gen. Weygand has made his choice. He's shortening his line in the north, awaiting the German-Italian thrust in the south.

The most reliable military expert of figure Hitler has a 6 to 4 chance to work his squeeze against France, shear away the closest friend of England.

But, they still remind you that the final blow against England has not yet come, probably won't until the French squeeze is clamped on tight. And whatever happens in France, military odds are also six-to- four that Hitler won't have the strength left to deal the knockout blow to England—certainly not before the snow flies.

● SERIAL STORY

AN EYE FOR A GAL

BY HARRY HARRISON KROLL

COPYRIGHT, 1940, NEA SERVICE, INC.

YESTERDAY: As he starts the game, Rossy is wild. He feels a murderous impulse to beam the batters facing him. Then he hears Dr. Tollivar, telling him to settle down. In that moment he knows Dr. Tollivar threw the ball that killed his father. Rossy comes through, fans the next three batters.

CHAPTER XI

NOTHING like that game could ever happen again, Rossy McAfee well knew, when the last ball was pitched. He had wrought a no-hit no-run athletic miracle out of as unpromising material as one could hope to see.

"Let's go to my office," Coach Hurd nodded, after introducing Ike Hill. They took chairs in the room, pictured with athletic teams; and Hill smoked.

"So you're Ross McAfee," Hill murmured. "I knew your father."

"You did?" Rossy cried.

"Mighty well. I scouted the game when he was killed."

"You did!"

"Absolutely. It was the first Hell'n-Damnation ball game I ever saw—and the last. You know how stories drift out—the wildest, craziest ball players that ever were; feuded even in their ball games; great pitchers, great hitters, great everything.

"But you, bub, have the goods, and no doubt about that. I'm going to offer you a contract that will nail you down, make it possible for you to go on with your education and play ball, and give you time for ripening a little. You're still too green in the husk. Later you'll probably have to be farmed out to one of the bush leagues. But if you grow like I think you will, you'll be up there some of these days dazzling the little old natives in the big time."

"There's the dotted line," Coach Hurd grinned.

"Give me a pen," Rossy said faintly, and he signed with irregular letters that betrayed his joy and excitement.

THAT evening at supper at Dr. Tollivar's the table talk was all about the game, about Rossy's great break. Dr. Tollivar said simply:

"McAfee deserved it. He had it coming to him. Now, Judy, I wish you would wrap up a change for me, and not put in my old straight razor—but the electric. Rossy and I are going up into Hell'n-Damnation early in the morning for the weekend. You'll excuse me now," he smiled. "I have some work at the office before I can get off." He took his hat and went out.

Judy smiled at Rossy. "I'll pack later. Let's sit in the front room and talk about everything. For this is a great day for you, Rossy. I need not tell you that, though," she added, as they sat on the sofa.

She gave him a penetrating look. "Maybe I shouldn't tell you this, Rossy. But really I want you to know it. You have a lot to thank to daddy for this day's gifts. He arranged for Ike Hill to come, was in touch with him weeks ago about you.

"Daddy has strained every possible point to make college available to you. He secured the scholarship, worked it out with Coach Hurd that you were to stay with us without cost, and from the day Coach Hurd saw you away last summer you have been constantly on his—our—mind.

"You'll forgive me for reminding you. I do it not for any appreciation, but simply so that you will understand other things that may come up."

"I'm glad you told me," he said. "But why is your father so—so interested in me?"

"I think he'll tell you that tomorrow."

Then, without knowing just how it had happened, Judy was in his arms and he kissed her. The radio was going, mutely doing a love waltz by Strauss. Outside the excitement of the afternoon rose and fell, dying hard because of the intensity of it.

Somehow Rossy could not keep on holding Judy there so close to him. He let her ease out of his embrace. Clumsily enough he got to his feet and said, "I reckon I've got a little packing to do too. I'd better be at it. Good night."

He moved quickly out and ran upstairs.

BEFORE dawn Rossy and Dr. Tollivar were driving off the slumbering campus. The powerful car devoured the miles. It was possible by a long detour to come into the village in Hell'n-Damnation in the car, and Dr. Tollivar, to Rossy's amazement, parked in front of Judge Jesse Leverage's. Squire Jesse came out and they all shook hands.

"I'll git you the mule and buggy, Doc," Leverage said, and not long afterward Tollivar and Rossy were driving up the winding old road that went to the school house and church on the grounds of Old Ebenezer.

They reached the ball grounds. "Whoa," Tollivar said, and the two got out.

"It's been a long time since I was here," Tollivar murmured.

"Yes," Rossy nodded. "That was the day my pappy was killed."

"Yes," Dr. Tollivar said, not looking at him.

"So you was the pitcher that day for the Tollivers. You are a Tolliver, and not a Tollivar."

"That's right. Before we go into the matter that really brought us here, McAfee, I'll give you some idea of all that was behind that game. Then we'll go have a look at the land in dispute between you and your cousin. I understand, of course, that really hasn't gone into court yet.

"I may as well tell you, however, I have been corresponding with old Jesse Leverage, and I have all the papers on that case. I have had a lawyer down at Mountain City working on it too. Now I think we have something to work on, and it will stand up in court."

"I don't know that I'm keering as much about that now as I am about the other thing," Rossy said, bitter in spite of himself.

"Let's sit down," Dr. Tollivar said, and they took a seat on the lower planks of the grandstand. The college president lighted a cigar, smoking thoughtfully. Rossy did not smoke.

"All right. I was pitching out there. It was up to me to kill your father. I remember that all very well, Rossy—better perhaps than you do or ever can.

"You see, there had been a meeting of the Tolliver clan. My folks and I had only lately come back into the mountains from Texas where my dad had gone to avoid killing a McAfee or getting killed by the McAfees. We had heard the feud had died down and now the clans were playing ball. So father returned. But there was a dispute, bad feeling was roiled again, and just to satisfy the family dad and I went to the meeting at one of the Tolliver cabins that night when lots were drawn for the hand who would kill.

"Well, it was my infernal luck to be IT. I know now it was all a put-up job but I didn't know it then.

"I was to pitch that game. They told me, 'You're a great pitcher. You've got everything. But when you're wild you're wild. Tomorrow you need only be wild but accurate. You understand. Bean McAfee. Hit him back of the ear. He dodges right-handed. It will be an accident.'

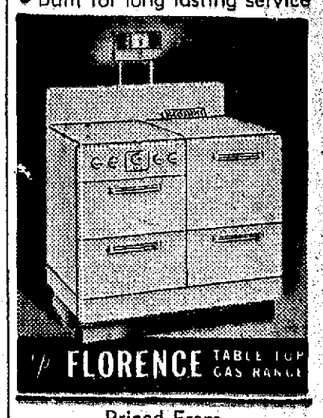

"You know what kind of a feeling I took into that game. All I could think of was what they had said. And by some deadly fascination, in my nervousness, I pitched the ball that knocked your father unconscious.

"But it was not that lick that killed him. He was killed by a blow behind the grandstand by a member of your own family."

Little Missouri Dam Recommended by U. S. Engineers

Would Generate 15,000 KWH Above Murfreesboro

FIRST OF SERIES

Recreation, Power and Flood Control Project

WASHINGTON —(AP)— Construction of a huge flood control storage reservoir and power plant on the Little Missouri river near Murfreesboro, Ark., was recommended to Congress Thursday by U. S. Army Engineers.

The reservoir would have a capacity of 410,000 acre-feet, while the power plant would have an initial installation of approximately 15,000 kilowatts. The reservoir and power plant, estimately $330,000 for improvement of channels below Murfreesboro and on the Terre Noire and Ozan creeks and for the repair of levees along the Terre Noire Creek.

L. R. Recommendation

LITTLE ROCK — Recommendations for the dam and flood control reservoir, 15 miles north of Murfreesboro on the Little Missouri river were made to the chif of army engineers by the Little Rock District office as a part of the Ouachita Valley Flood Control program.

The dam would be one of a series for tributaries of the Ouachita, which would reduce danger of floods and aid in a year around channel control program for the Ouachita. The reservoir would be valuable as a recreation project and for power development, although flood control would be the major item.

PROPOSED CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT NO. 30

Proposed by the General Assembly and filed in the office of the Secretary of State on 15th day of March 1939.

BE IT RESOLVED BY THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES AND SENATE OF THE STATE OF ARKANSAS AND MAJORITY OF BOTH HOUSES AGREEING THERETO:

That the following is hereby proposed as an amendment to the Constitution of the State of Arkansas, and the same being submitted to the electors of the State for approval or rejection at the next general election for Senators and Representatives, if a majority of the electors voting thereon adopt such amendment, the same shall become a part of the Constitution of the State of Arkansas, towit:

Section 1. Amendment No. 29 to the Constitution of the State of Arkansas is hereby repealed.

Section 2. Vacancies in the office of the United States Senator, and in all elective state, district, circuit, county and township offices except those of Lieutenant Governor, Member of the General Assembly and Representative in the Congress of United States, shall be filled by appointment by the Governor.

Section 3. The Governor, Lieutenant Governor and Acting Governor shall be ineligible for appointment to fill any vacancies occurring or any office or position created, and resignation shall not remove such ineligibility. Husbands and wives of such officers, and relatives of such officers, or of their husbands and wives within the fourth degree of consanguinity or affinity, shall likewise be ineligible.

Section 4. No person holding office contrary to this amendment shall be paid any compensation for his services. Any warrant, voucher or evidence of indebtedness issued in payment for such services shall be void.

Section 5. The appointee shall serve during the entire unexpired term in the office in which the vacancy occurs if such office would in regular course be filled at the next general election if no vacancy had occurred. If such office would not in regular course be filled at such next general election the vacancy shall be filled as follows: At the next general election, if the vacancy occurs four months or more prior thereto, and at the second general election after the vacancy occurs if the vacancy occurs less than four months before the next general election after it occurs. The person so elected shall take office on the 1st day of January following his election.

Witness my hand and Seal this 1st day of May, 1940.

Nashville Begins to Ship Peaches

Trucks Are Beginning to Move Early Rose Crops

NASHVILLE, Ark.—The first of the 1940 peach crop from the Highland District have moved from this city, and the harvesting of peaches will be under way here to some extent practically all the time now until the last of the large Elberta crop is moved.

The Early Rose crop started moving in small quantities this week, all the crop so far having been sent by express or by truck. Car lot loadings may not be made of the Early Rose variety, since cash buyers in trucks usually take practically all this crop.

Following the Early Rose crop, the Beauty crop will start moving from the district. There will be many more of the Beauties than of the Early Rose. Shortly after the finish of the Beauty crop the Elbertas will be ready for harvest, usually starting between the 10th and 15th of July.

The peaches in the district this year are of unusual high quality, the orchardists having been exceptionally careful in their cultivation and care of the orchards to prevent worms and other trouble, and to produce finer fruit. It is believed the Beauties and Elbertas will be of as high quality as have ever ben produced here, and the Early Rose so far are a little above the average.

Already basket firms and orchard supplies are showing signs of the approaching big harvest, and in a short time the city will be full of people who will come here to work as sales forces, inspectors, etc.

hesitate yet to declare themselves against Nazi Germany?"

In announcing his second plea to Mr. Roosevelt for aid—the first, asking all aid short of an expeditionary force, having been made public today—the premier declared: "It is necessary that clouds of airplanes come from across the Atlantic to crush the evil power that has descended over Europe."

Having already received a promise of the full material aid of the United States, Reynaud's urgent request was taken to mean he had in mind that planes should be rushed here by flying them across the ocean.

In an effort to speed up delivery of planes to France, American craft have been flown to Canada and flown from there, but no effort at transoceanic flight from the United States has been made.

He spoke of the French as "losing this battle," and remarked pointedly that France's fight "has no further sense" if a growing hope of a "common victory" is not seen—"even far away."

Not to Defend Paris

BERLIN —(AP)— Authoritative reports of an impending German radio ultimatum for surrender of Paris, with the alternative of devastation, were followed Thursday night by a German news agency report from Paris that the French would not defend the city from within. One interpretation was that the French decision had spared the city.

None could say whether it could be regarded as satisfaction in advance of the expected demand from the German high command that the capital surrender. This left uncertain the fate of Paris.

There was no confirmation that negotiations were under way through a third party—apparently the United States embassy at Paris—to withdraw the battle zone from Paris. One source said United States Ambassador Bullitt had relayed a message from the French, saying only firemen and police remained to watch over th newly declared "open city."

Arkansas Diamond Mine to Be Sold

Chicagoan Bids $175,000 for Murfreesboro Plant

LITTLE ROCK — Granting an option to Ray E. Blick of Chicago, Ill., to buy real estate holdings of the Arkansas Diamond Corporation near Murfreesboro, Pike county, will be considered at a special meeting of stockholders at the corporation's principal office, Room 1003 of the Electric building, Richmond, Va. at 10 a. m. June 27.

A letter to stockholders from Roy L. Thompson of Little Rock, corporation president, said that Mr. Blick had offered to pay $2,500 for a one-year option to buy all the corporation's real estate, Mr. Blick being entitled to renew the option for a second year upon payment of $10,000. If the option were exercised, he would pay $175,000 for a conveyance of the real estate, provided he accepts the title after examining abstracts of title.

Americans Dazed

son was in complete command of his party.

The Republican "old guard" regulars were for Elihu Root. The "Teddy" Roosevelt progressive wing hated Root. To get the party together a compromise candidate was necessary. He was found in Charles Evans Hughes, who resigned from the Supreme Court to run. Hughes, like Tom Dewey today, had gotten his political start as an aggressive public prosecutor.

The compromise worked. Hughes led from the start, and on the third ballot at Chicago, he won easily. Is such a compromise GOP candidate appearing today, in such a form as, say, Wendell Willkie?

Wilson, as expected, was nominated by acclamation at the St. Louis meeting of the Democrats.

The platforms were very similar. Both promised strict neutrality without sacrifice of American rights. Both adhered to the Monroe doctrine and promised better Pan American relations. The only platform differences were on tariff and minor matters.

Foreign policy, keeping out of war, and "Americanism" were the real campaign issues. There was no "Fifth Column" in 1916 by that name, but the same prbolem existed. Wilson roundly condemned "all aliances and combinations of individuals in this country of whatever nationality or descet who agree and conspire together for the purpose of embarrassing or weakening the government . .

President Wilson during the campaign felt called on to disavow specifically the support of "hyphenated" citizens. To Jeremiah O'Leary, who had written him a note of condemnation for being "pro-Ally," Wilson publicly replied, "I would feel deply mortified to have you or anybody like you vote for me . . "

Democrats Got Peace Votes

Though the Democrats did not specifically promise to keep the country out of war under any and all circumstances, many voted for them, believing their votes were peace-insurance.

Nevertheless the result was catwhisker close. Had Hughes not ignored Governor Johnson in California, thereby alienating his progressive following there, he might easily have won.

The vote was so close that almost all Democrats conceded.

A full week was required to certify the count of 27 to 255 electoral votes and 9,116,296 to 8,547,474 popular votes—the closest result since the disputed Hayes-Tilden election of 1876.

It's a Small World

MANHATTAN, Kas.—(AP)—This is stranger than fiction. Sidney Harry, while golfing, remarked to a friend that he had attended Kansas State college three years and never had met President F. D. Farrell. A ball thumped him on the back and put a period to the sentence. The apologetic golfer who came hurrying forward was President Farrell.
